Int. Kren-Dear Stri-This is to certify that I have used your Sure Cuts for Catarri, and did it is all you chilm it to be, and even more. I have had Canarri for ten years. I suffered much with pain in my head, would take cold very case, which would make my throat very sore. There was almost a constant taking in my throat work would make my throat very sore. There was almost a constant taking in my throat, so I could not sleep. When askep my throat would all up and strangle me, and my sight also was hadly affected, so that very often I was unable to read the coffee and spice sign on Yaunkill street, opposite J. C. Mendenhall's fash market, where I have been at work, a distance of perhaps four reds; in fact, I could get the effect of Catarria all through my system. But these troubles have all disappeared now. I can go in bed and rest all might, which is something I have not been able to do for six years. I hope you will publish this, and that the hundreds who are suffering as I have sufficied may pay attention to this letter. If this is published, it sould advise any one that may be troubled with any disease, however taid or long standing, to call on IIr. Keek. I think he can care you if any one can.

DAVID AND ANNA MATSON.

By Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway,

Editor "New Northwest," Portland, Oregon,

A new epic, from a vigorous and skillful pen, on a subject which occupies a large place in the scial discussions of the day. The subject is taken from Mr. Whittier's short narrative of "Duyid Matson," with which the reader is probably limithar. Pavid Matson, a Merrimae suftor, was captured by the Algerines (during one of his veryages) and sold into slavery. After many years he obtained refease and was on his way to the home of his boyhood, when he fell in with his old employer, who informed him that his wife, believing him dead, had remarried, and, stimmed by his trouble, he surrendered all claim as husband and father to the man who had stepped into his place, and departed. Mes. Duniway has bound a theme in this story with which her heart beats in warmest sympathy, and her lines flow on in the smooth endence in-dicative of the fullest accord. She pletures the gentle, tender, trustful Anna and the wily, cov ctons Pelatlah in vivid colors; and how years of poverty and longing, and the cries of the hun gry boys, compelled poor Anna to yield to Pelatlah's importunity. "Rise, rejoice, My poor, unmated dove," said he

"And look henceforth for love to me."

"Become my wife and you shall be Made happy through prosperity," While, if she persists in declining his advances, wolf-like, he threatens to abandon her to starvation and cold. And this Pelatiah was a "deacon," " In exhortations deep and loud." The wunderings of David, his captivity, release, hapless interview with Pelatiab, discovery of Anna's second witchood, and his sad going back to Algeria, are all told so pathetically that our terlings are deeply enlisted. No one, with any true sentiment, can read the poem without being thoroughly stirred. The illustrations are in admirable keeping with the passages they are designed to portray, and a fine sugraving of the author is a fitting frontispiece. The subject spirit, fire and passion of the poem should give it an extensive reading, aside from the interest which the literary reputation of the author must awaken in it. As a specimen of book-making the volume is certainly beautiful, and would adorn any center-table.

We know of no work so well adapted as a present. It is printed on heavy tinted paper and most beautifully bound, price, $2.00; full gift extra, $2.00. For sale by book-saile by mail, post-paid, b
